Frankfort Delays Approval for NKU's Development Efforts

Confusion Prompts NKU To Revise Contract

MICHAEL BUNZEL
NEWS EDITOR

The Personal Service Contract Review Committee, in last week's meeting in Frankfort, delayed the approval of a contract which would allow NKU to explore land development.

NKU is now forced to revise the proposal it submitted for a contract with Burgess & Niple Ltd.

Legislators were confused by the wording of the $10,000 contract. It states the firm was hired to look for the best suitable land for a convocation center, a project which the university is no longer actively pursuing.

NKU also decided to back the Northern Kentucky community in its effort to receive funding for a convention center in Covington.

Dennis Taulbee, vice-president for administrative affairs, said he could understand the concerns and confusion of the committee.

"The way we worded it (the biennial proposal), it does state plans for a convocation center," he said. "The university is going to revise it and then resubmit the contract for approval."

"Our timing was bad. The contract is much broader than the convocation center. It seeks to help and determine which pieces of property are most suited for development."

There is 440 acres of land that is available to the university, Taulbee said. He would not specify the location of the land, but according to some sources the land is on the other side of John Hills Road.

NKU has a total of $950,000 to use on land acquisition. Half of that was given by the General Assembly in 1990, and the university matched that total. However, this may not be enough.

"The land in question is very expensive. We're aware one parcel of that land was recently sold for $43,000/acre," Taulbee said. "But we may not need all of the 440 acres. We're in the process of evaluating how much additional land NKU does need."

Jerry Keltch, principle head of Burgess & Niple said he is just happy to have been chosen by NKU.

"We're excited about doing the site analysis and continuing our part in the total master plan at the university," he said.

"We understand their concerns," Taulbee added. "They raised legitimate concerns and we're prepared to address them."

New Position in University Development

Schlacter Named Assistant Vice President

Rosemary Schlacter is NKU's newest administrator. Photo provided.

NEWS EDITOR

Her office still wasn't ready to take on the character of its new occupant. A ladder, chips of paint on the floor, and a desk, that not as yet showed the signs of a new administrator, is all the character it possesses.

But from all indications, this office will soon be a place of bustling activity that will only be a shadow of its former self.

The woman who occupies this office is the newly appointed assistant vice-president of development for NKU, Rosemary Schlacter.

With NKU growing each year, school officials saw the need for a person to raise money for campus projects other than looking south to Frankfort for help.

Schlacter will head the school's first ever capital campaign. The campaign is an effort to raise money from private sources to finance new buildings, campus improvements and scholarship programs.

"We want to raise a lot of money to fund projects that couldn't be funded otherwise," she said. "And I have every confidence that we can do it."

Peter Hollister, vice-president of university relations and development, said Schlacter brings a valuable knowledge of the Greater Cincinnati area to the university.

"She will provide good leadership to our capital gifts campaign," he said.

"They wanted somebody who knew the community and I know the territory," Schlacter said.

Eleven years ago, Schlacter founded 25th Hour, a fund raising and public relations firm in Cincinnati. It raised funding for clients from individual donors to foundations.

She also directed "Enjoy the Arts," which allowed her to promote arts programming and special events on NKU's campus and elsewhere.

Working with students and faculty at NKU was always a pleasant experience for her, Schlacter said.

"People cared and were always very friendly to me and that is still evident today," she said.

Leaving 25th Hour behind was not a hard decision for her, she said, because she was looking to work for a large institution.

"I wanted to work on a multi-million dollar campaign for a big institution like NKU," said Schlacter.

The school is compiling a prospect list of people who could contribute, including private citizens, businesses and foundations, she said.

Some projects that will benefit from her fund raising are the plans for a new faculty/alumni center, campus improvements such as the addition of some parking garages, athletic department improvements and the creation of some scholarship projects, Schlacter said.

NKU To Host 1991 SG State Conference

STACEY DURBIN

Student Government members from all across Kentucky will soon be converging on Northern's campus for the State Student Government Conference.

Student Governments from Kentucky's colleges and universities were invited to participate in what Northern's SG members say will be an informative weekend.

Michelle Deeley, former NKU SG president and current chairperson for the state conference committee expects to see 125 SG representatives here on Oct. 25-27.

The state conference began some ten years ago to not only provide informative lectures dealing with SG issues, but also to encourage communication between Kentucky Student Governments, said Deeley.

NKU students and student organizations may secure slots in Saturday's lectures by contacting Deeley or Student Government before Thursday, Oct. 24. There will be a $10 fee for materials and lunch, but Deeley said she feels it is worth it.

"A lot of it is general leadership seminars," said Deeley. "We have really top-notch speakers."

NKU faculty, staff and alumni, as well as members of the community will conduct lectures on topics such as cultural diversity, developing leadership skills, time and stress management and motivation.

Kenneth Lucas, a recently retired member of NKU's Board of Regents will serve as keynote speaker for the event.

Other speakers include: Gary Cox from the Council on Higher Education, Stephen Boyd, communication professor, Dean of Students Bill Lamb and Kelly Gillespie of Proctor and Gamble.

NKU received the honor of hosting the convention after presenting a bid to the Board of Student Body Presidents at last year's conference at Murray State University.

"No one had as much to offer as Northern," said Deeley, "especially with Cincinnati."

Wilkinson Declares Kentucky
Higher Education Week

STAFF REPORT

"Share in a Community Endeavor" is this year's theme for National Higher Education Week, Oct. 13-19.

Kentucky Governor Wallace G. Wilkinson said he urges all citizens and enterprises in Kentucky "to investigate how higher education shares in the work of their communities, to deepen their understanding of the services of Kentucky higher education and to strengthen their support of higher education so that it may give even greater teaching, research and public service to the Commonwealth and its people."

Kentucky's higher education institutions play an important role in the improvement and reform of education at all levels, which today should be the foremost endeavor of every Kentucky community, according to Wilkinson.

Planning will be a continuous process in NKU's strategic plan. According to the Council of Higher Education, the university is 22 years old and has undergone a number of changes over this period of time including enrollment increases, additional building construction and budget increases.

National Higher Education Week is an annual event sponsored by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE). It is designed to focus public and media attention on the increased need for public and private support of higher education.

This year's theme was selected in an effort to promote the important roles colleges, universities and their graduates play in shaping local, state, national and world communities.

Since the creation of National Higher Education week, higher education communities across the United States have organized activities and campus open houses in which millions have participated.

LSAT Preparation

Workshop Held Soon

KRISTA WAGNER

The Salmon P. Chase College of Law is sponsoring a Law School Admissions Test (LSAT) Preparation Workshop on Friday, November 22, 191, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The workshop, directed by Paul Weber, chairman of the political science department at the University of Louisville, is designed to take the fear factor out of the LSAT.

Weber will address the psychology of test taking, as well as administer and analyze a sample LSAT.

Kelly Diehl, assistant dean of admissions at Chase, stresses while many people think the LSAT is a general knowledge test, it is actually more of a reading comprehension and reasoning test. This is why test preparation is so important, in order to score successfully on the LSAT, she said.

Jim Arnold, a Chase student, felt the LSAT workshop was very helpful.

"I had no idea what it was going to be like. Once I went through the course I knew what my weaknesses were and what I needed to improve upon."

The workshop will be held in the Moot Court Room, 420 Nunn Hall. A non-refundable fifteen dollar registration fee will be required to cover the cost of materials and lunch.

As classroom seating is limited, reservations will be accepted on a first-come, first-served basis. If interested in attending the LSAT Preparation Workshop, contact Denise Schwab (572-6476).

Consensual Relationship Policy

Input Needed On Issue

STACEY DURBIN
MANAGING EDITOR

Student Government needs input on a complex new issue facing NKU.

The issue is consensual relationships. The complexity of it is whether Northern needs to pursue it or not.

The University of Wisconsin-Madison defines consensual relationships as "those amorous, romantic or sexual relationships in which both parties appear to have consented, but where there is a definite power differential between the two parties," according to its statement on consensual relationships.

Northern has no written policy of consensual relationships, but has a committee of students, faculty, staff and administration currently discussing the issue.

"(The committee is) just reviewing policies from other colleges to see whether or not NKU needs a policy like this," said Vice President for Student Affairs Cynthia Dickens.

It is an issue that needed to be looked into, said Dickens. One person is in a position to affect the educational future of another.

Once the committee reaches a decision, a recommendation will then go to Student Government, Faculty Senate and other similar organizations before it reaches the president and his staff, said Dickens.

SG President Dave Stringer said he wondered if the policy would address students placed or elected in high positions.

He gave an example: if he were dating a committee chairperson and an executive council position became open, if he promoted that student to the position, would that be considered a conflict of interest?

These and many more issues concerning consensual relationships are facing this committee. Any comments can be sent to Student Government Office Administrator Amy Arbino, University Center 210.

Residence Hall students interested in shaping the policies of the new Residential Village and planning exciting activities for the current Residence Halls will have a chance to do just that.

Applications for Residence Hall Council are now available in the Kentucky Hall lobby. Elections are scheduled for Oct. 28-29.

"It gives students an opportunity for leadership," said Jeanne Sayer, assistant director of residential life. "It's also a chance for students to do something about the environment in which they live."

Kristi Eubanks, residence hall council chairperson, agrees.

"(Students) can help out with planning activities for the halls, also," she said.

"Before the end of the semester we will be talking to Jeanne Sayer to discuss policies that will be enacted in the new residence halls."

Interested residents can contact Residence Hall Director Sandra Hester (572-5999) or pick up an application.

Sexual Harassment: A Tough Call

DIANE GOETZ
EDITOR

"Your underwear looks real sexy," declared my manager at a restaurant I'd rather not name. Flustered, I stood up and gave him a very puzzled look. He responded, "I can see them through your white pants." Nervously, I scampered off into the kitchen to escape him.

There I was, a young, innocent and very naive 17 year-old high school senior fresh into the work force. Being that young, I didn't know how to react. So, I pretended it never happened and feared the day I would be left alone with him again.

About a month later, I quit my job. Needless to say, this incident has stuck with me and I'm certain it always will.

I suppose this situation upsets me more today than when I was a teenager. It's frightening and something that I call sexual harassment.

Many of you reading this are clearly calling it sexual harassment. Others are thinking that this was an innocent statement and I've made too much out of it.

This is the problem with sexual harassment. What one person calls harassment, another views differently.

When Anita Hill came forward last week during the Clarence Thomas hearings, I heard comments like 'why in a desperate hour has she come forward?' or my personal favorite, 'that bitch is lying.'

That's when I clearly knew that sexual harassment was not a black and white issue. There is a shade of gray that hovers over top of it. It's difficult to prove and hard for witnesses to talk about it.

It takes a lot of courage to come forward and admit that an incident of this nature has occurred. Anyone who comes forward is treated like a criminal. 'She's lying or exaggerating' is always the accused response.

I can only wonder why this is so. Women are also treated this way in cases of rape. It's cruel and unfair punishment for someone who has experienced something as traumatic as rape or harassment.

It's hard to be a woman and not take this personally. Why should the one coming forward be on trial? Few people in my life knew that this incident ever occurred to me as a teenager. I was scared to tell anyone.

I kept blaming myself figuring I must have done something to provoke this behavior. It hasn't been until recently that I realized I wasn't at fault. I was an innocent kid, a victim.

Sexual harassment is an issue of power. It's especially uncomfortable when it is an employer/employee or student/teacher relationship.

It's scary and you always blame yourself, and you play back the incident over and over in your mind. Afraid to say anything for fear of being treated as a criminal, the majority of these cases go unreported.

All I've heard all week from people is 'this Anita Hill is lying.' Why can't people say this of Judge Thomas. Why are the women who come forward immediately lying. I for one do not want a sexist man who treats women as inferiors sitting on the highest court in the United States.

People only seem to be interested with Thomas' views on abortion. What about his views of women in general? He has a wife, but how does he treat her?

The allegations are one word versus another. You can believe him or her and it's a tough call. I can't tell you who I believe. There is no proof other than hearsay.

Perhaps being a victim myself, I sympathize with Hill. It takes a lot of courage to come forward and be grilled by the press. I admire her for this action. I honestly believe that she is on trial more so than Thomas.

What is wrong here? People tell us to come forward with complaints of this nature, but when we do, we're the criminals. Where's the justice anyway? A victim can never be at peace. It's just not fair.

Men are always saying that women scream harassment at the slightest thing. But, let's play a game. Any man reading this, picture your boss a homosexual man who is always making sexual comments to you. Are you uncomfortable with this thought? Good, then I've proved my point.

A female boss can harass you and it just won't have the impact. A man will just basically not feel threatened by a woman. It's that simple.

I'm sick of men and women saying, 'women should quit whining about these incidents.' It's a different ball game when it happens to you.

I guess it's all in the interpretation. Perhaps my former manager didn't mean anything by it. Then again, maybe he did. One never knows.

All I do know is if that man was ever running for public office, I hope I have the courage to come forward.

Band Playing For A Different Audience

SCOTT PIERCE
STAFF WRITER

Americana Amusement Park is becoming a home field advantage for local rock band Naked Truth.

After winning last year's battle of the bands, it returned this year to defend its title on Aug. 30. It won again in near flawless fashion and took home $10,000 worth of PA equipment.

This is just one more entry in Naked Truth's already impressive list of accolades. This hard working band is comprised of vocalist Greg Hupp, bassist Ron Harden, drummer Jim Brink and guitarists Matt Steffan and NKU senior Clark Connely.

"There were around 40 or 50 bands, from the tri-state area, competing all summer," Connely said.

The finalists of the competition were narrowed down to ten, with Naked Truth favored as the defending champion.

Harden said the key to the band's success was doing originals instead of production and recording of its second demo tape.

"It's a three song tape," Connely said. "They'll only be sent to record companies. It won't be in stores."

Harden said the key to the band's success was doing originals instead of covers and not being commercial.

At the end of October, CBS records is meeting with the band to discuss the possibility of a future record contract, according to a source close to the band.

After being featured in Metal Edge magazine, Naked Truth has received nearly 150 letters from around the county. Each person who writes gets a Naked Truth kit.

"We send an order form for merchandising, pins and pictures," Brink said.

While awaiting completion of the tape, the Naked Truth isn't just idly sitting by. On Oct. 18 and 19, they will be headlining at Never On Sundays and on Oct. 25, they will be at Bogart's. They are also planning a possible show with another local band, Prizoner, on New Year's Eve.

Later in the winter, the band has tentative plans to play in Chicago, New York and in Tampa, Fla., in front of record company representatives.

Graduate Rocks His Way To Radio

KELLI MILLIGAN
COPY EDITOR

Not so long ago a small boy named Tom Neiheisel listened to late night AM radio. At night, many AM stations can be heard from across the country. Cincinnati's own 700 WLW, for example, can be heard all over the nation late at night.

Neiheisel's favorite station was WLS, which broadcast from Chicago. His favorite disc-jockey was WLS' Jeff Davis.

Today, Neiheisel (a.k.a. Jeff Davis), a May 1991 graduate of NKU, works the 6 a.m. - 10 a.m. shift at WFOX, 94.9 FM.

"I listened to WLS, a legendary Top 40 station, before AM changed to all talk," said Neiheisel. "The station really rocked and the DJ's name was Jeff Davis. Now there is a 'Jeff Davis' in almost every medium."

All those late nights did not go to waste, Neiheisel has been interested in radio for as long as he can remember.

"I didn't want a real job," joked Neiheisel. "Radio always interested me."

He said he's been working in radio since he was 16 years old.

"I worked at WUBE (now B 105)," said Neiheisel. "I worked at the top 20 show, but I always wanted to work at the oldies station, BLJ."

In September of 1988, Neiheisel moved on to FOX and he said he likes it there.

"I like the music," he said. "I did overnight shifts for two and a half years and then got a day shift on Sundays."

Now, Neiheisel is an important part of the daily morning show.

"I play the music," said Neiheisel. "I'm kind of the director. I make sure everything runs smoothly."

When the station is live on location anywhere he coordinates the music from the studio, he said.

Neiheisel also said the Jay Baker is the morning show personality and is the creative force behind the show.

"Jay sometimes comes in on the weekends to work on the show," he said.

"There aren't many DJs that will come in on the weekends to do the work."

He arrives at the studio at 5:45 a.m. and at 6 a.m. he gets to work.

"The music is pre-scheduled by the music director," he said. "Everything is set aside the day before. I just keep the music playing."

Neiheisel said he is more interested in the programming side of radio and wants to someday be a programming director, but he's happy with what he is doing now.

Nevertheless, he does come around NKU now and then. He recently put together the slide show for Greek Formal a few weeks ago and he visits his friends at WRFN.

He said one of his fondest memories of NKU is Musicfest of 1990.

"The Menus and The Other Side played and I was program director at RFN and involved with the Activities Programming Board, which was in charge of Musicfest," he said. "The Menus were cool and The Other Side went to school at NKU. It was fun."

Does he miss anything at NKU?

"Oh yeah," he said. "Everything was fun, from the summer of 1988 to the fall of 1989, everything was fun. I miss it."

Graduation Not So SweetLife Not Full Of 'Pomp And Circumstance'

FRED SORINO
STAFF WRITER

Life after college may look like nothing but freedom to those students who are looking forward to graduation, but to those former students who are looking back on their college days, the perception changes quite a bit; college days begin to look like the days of freedom. The definition of freedom changes.

According to three recent NKU graduates, definitions and perceptions alike have a tendency to change after graduation.

Following are insights from some people in the know about life after graduation.

Herb Kunz, who graduated from NKU in 1990 with a bachelor of science in accounting and a minor in finance, said he was surprised at how much he missed school after graduation.

"It was funny," Kunz said. "I couldn't wait for four years to graduate and then when I did I wished I was back in school."

Other students expressed similar sentiments.

Henry Foreman, who graduated from NKU in 1991 with a major in political science said he agrees, life was pretty boring at first after graduation.

"I would talk to my friends who were still in school and feel a little jealous," said Foreman. "It was funny because even though I had just graduated I felt like I was already in a different stage of life."

Kunz said going home to New Jersey and leaving his closest friends was a very difficult thing to do.

"I really didn't want to leave my friends," said Kunz. "But I had to go where I felt my best options were. I didn't want to leave but I had to get on with my life and start working."

Jenny Frommeyer, who graduated from NKU in 1991 with an associate degree in radiology, agreed that life as a college graduate is very different than life as a college student. She said she feels like she is always working.

"Since I've graduated work seems to be my number one priority. It was hard at first, but you get used to it after a while," she said.

Snowbird Cherokees

Professor Gets Published

KRISTA WAGNER
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Charlotte Neely, associate professor of anthropology at NKU, recently published a book, Snowbird Cherokees: People of Persistence. Her work is the first ethnographic study of the Cherokees of North Carolina.

The Snowbird Cherokee is a mountain community believed to be the most traditional and adaptive members of their tribe, according to Neely.

Snowbird, a community of fewer than 400 people, has the highest number of "full-blood" Cherokee members in the east. It has the highest percentage of Cherokees fluent in the native language, said Neely.

Snowbird Cherokees examines two important issues in the Snowbird peoples' self awareness - their effort to gain favorable representation on the tribal council and the Trail of Tears Signing. Both the North Carolina and Oklahoma Cherokees come together to deal with cultural conservation at the Trail of Tears Signing, she said.

The Trail of Tears was the path many Cherokee Indians followed when they were forced from North Carolina to Oklahoma Territory.

Of the 16,000 Cherokees removed,

4,000 (mostly children and elderly) perished. Thousands were wiped out by exposure to "white" diseases such as small pox and measles, to which they had no immunity, Neely said.

The Oklahoma Indian Territory, promised to the Cherokees in treaties was slowly being taken away from them in the early 1890's. The Cherokees of North Carolina, such as the Snowbirds, managed to avoid removal by hiding out in the mountains or by the legal means of the time.

Neely said she hopes that by reading Snowbird Cherokees, people will realize that "native Americans are not losers. It is possible for them, as a people, to hang on to their traditional values and still be a part of mainstream America."

The Snowbirds do not have a problem being both average Americans and traditional Cherokees. Neely said it is important to her that those who read the book gain this understanding.

Many books written about Indian life deal only with the negative aspects and not with those which are positive, she said.

Neely said she was impressed with the Snowbird's belief that individuals should not only be a good member of their

SG To You

SG Plans Informative Alcohol Awareness Week

Dear Students,

This week is going to be an extremely busy week for Student Government, as Oct. 14-18 is Alcohol Awareness Week. We hope that you will participate in the variety of events we have scheduled for this week as they should be extremely informative.

I recently spoke to a group of people concerning the possibility of starting an organization concerning their major. The process of establishing an organization on campus is very easy. You must have twelve people interested in being members of the group, fill out two short forms (one has the names and addresses of the members and the other has basic information about the group) and have a constitution made up. The constitution is very simple and will probably only be two to three pages long. I strongly encourage you to take the initiative to start your own organization and take advantage of the networking, social, and leadership opportunities available to you. Please contact me at 572-5190 if you have any questions.

I would like to congratulate everyone on their outstanding efforts in support of the United Way. Please continue your support of this worthy cause in the future.

I would also like to congratulate all of you who survived mid-terms and would like to remind those who didn't that the last day to drop a class is Oct. 16.

Thank you for your time and please have a safe week.

Sincerely,
David A. Stringer
President, Student Government

A Funny Parking Story

Dear Editor:

I recently moved here from Oregon. People ask me if we have running water, or do we pump it from a well. HELLO? Is anybody there? Sorry, we still have to go to the nearest river.

When I decided to move to Kentucky, I was ready for anything. I expected quite a few changes. The least of my worries was parking, yet it should have been number one on my list.

I had a Volkswagen in Oregon. Here in Kentucky, I drive the "great pumpkin," a Buick Limited. Unfortunately, one doesn't park this car, one must dock it! Seriously, I could probably use a couple of those airplane flaggers to help me.

Anyway, I had this preconceived notion that Kentuckians were courteous and friendly. Wrong again! When it comes to parking, they become vicious, blood thirsty dogs behind the wheel.

Here is my story. As the "great pumpkin" and I were rolling along into Lot D, I spotted a car pulling out. I proceeded to stop and wait. Then, out of nowhere, a little "micro-machine" car, a Hyundai, whipped in and stole the spot. The lady driving did this with a smile on her face.

I was in good humor that day. So, I didn't put the Buick in overdrive and squash her piece of tin into the size of a dime. Because of my generous nature, I had to park in "no man's land."

Time passes and I am ready to leave school. I proceed to hike three miles to my car.

Now, picture this: Two lines of parallel cars, then they slowly curve into a semi-circle. Guess where my car was? That's right! STUCK! TRAPPED! NO WAY OUT! Just like being on one of the elevators at this school!

What was I supposed to do? Wait until Superman came to save the day? RIGHT! Tap my heels together three times and wish I was back home? It didn't work!

I @##&!#%^%*! for about five minutes. I then decided to at least try to get out. If I hit someone's car, it was that person's own Bad Karma coming back for blocking me in. It took ten minutes of going back and forth THREE INCHES at a time, but I made it out. I didn't even touch someone else's car. Believe me, I would have enjoyed scraping a little paint off of at least one car.

To conclude this tale of pitifully, puny parking, I would like to recommend the few suggestions:

- 1) NKU should make a deal with TANK, allowing full-time students to ride f.ee.
- 2) Share rides - multiple persons in a car.
- 3) Don't drive a car the size of RHODE ISLAND!!

Sincerely,
Hilary J. Bendele

Gubernatorial Race Heats Up

Hopkins Supporter Looks At Successes

Dear Editor:

As the governor's race draws closer, I would just like to say a few words on Larry Hopkins' behalf.

Larry Hopkins has been county clerk, state representative and state senator. He has voted over 6,000 times in the Kentucky Legislature and Congress and opposed the $1.3 billion tax increase. Brereton Jones, on the other hand, supported the $1.3 billion tax increase of 1990, but only half went to improve primary and secondary education.

Even Jones said, "Larry Hopkins is my congressman and I think he's done more to help the tobacco program than any other congressman up there."

Can Kentucky afford four more years of business as usual? For 20 years Kentucky has followed in one direction. Kentucky has the sixth heaviest income tax burden in the nation! State spending has gone up faster than federal spending! Personal income growth is second to LAST in the southeast!

You, the people of Kentucky, are paying higher taxes for more government. Say NO to business as usual! Don't just wish for a better Kentucky, vote for one. Vote Larry Hopkins for governor.

NOTICE TO PLAINTIFF CLASS

A class action has been certified by the Franklin Circuit Court in the matter of JULIE PINCOMBE et al vs. COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY, DEPARTMENT OF INSURANCE et al. All full-time students are included in the class and part-time students participating in at least seventy-five percent (75%) of the full-time curriculum.

The above styled class action is before the Franklin Circuit Court to determine the constitutionality of KRS 304. 18-115: a state statute requiring that all full-time students and part-time students enrolled in at least seventy-five percent (75%) of the full-time curriculum at any public or independent institution of higher education in the Commonwealth of Kentucky, must provide proof of medical health insurance coverage or purchase same to remain eligible for enrollment past September 1, 1991. As a member of the defined Plaintiff Class you have the right to request that the Court exclude you from the class. Requests for exclusion from the class must be in writing, and mailed, certified mail - return receipt requested, to the attention of Hon. Judge Joyce C. Smokers Voice Opinions

Dear Editor:

Comments were requested regarding the smoking policy for NKU. We, several members of the staff, felt obligated to express ours.

Too many times the environmental issues of air pollution are blamed on the smokers. I find in many different instances the air is polluted due to perfume, body odor, people passing gas and many other sources such as car exhaust. The only one that seems to get attacked is the smoker. Granted cigarette smoke can be troublesome to non-smokers, but this is not the only origin of air pollution.

Taking away the right to smoke all together is completely unfair to the general public as well as students and staff. Then let's take away the right to dowse ourselves in half a bottle of perfume (which makes me often sick to my stomach). At least a cigarette is gone in a few minutes, where perfume lingers indefinitely.

There should be a way to respect both smokers and non-smokers without doing away with anyone's rights. The university could create designated smoking areas and have strict enforcement of these policies rather than posting non-smoking signs above astrays. Restaurants and other public business seem to enforce these very same policies without any problems so it can be done on campus as well.

We hope these comments are taken into consideration, because we must protect our rights. A smoking ban would soon lead to other bans on other personal habits.

Thank you for your time concerning this matter.

College Students Beware: AIDS Is An Equal Opportunity Disease

DIANE GOETZ
EDITOR

Health officials estimate that approximately 5,000 people in the Greater Cincinnati area are infected with the AIDS virus.

Are you worried about contracting the AIDS virus? Sadly enough, students think they are untouchable and nothing could hurt them, but acquired immune deficiency syndrome is out there and it's a killer.

According to the American College Association, about one in 500 college students in the United States is HIV positive. An important fact is that someone will test HIV positive before the AIDS virus actually begins to take over.

NKU has a student population of 11,751. This would mean that somewhere around here, 23 students at NKU could be HIV positive.

Maybe he or she sits next to you in English class. Or maybe you are one of these 23 people.

According to the American College Health Association, five percent of reported

AIDS cases are transmitted through heterosexual contact. Health officials estimate that young people contract the disease in the late teens and early 20's, but the disease does not surface until later in life because of a five to ten year incubation period.

Surveys conducted by the American College Health Association have shown that students are aware of AIDS and how to prevent it, but they do not practice safe sex. When students have been drinking heavily or if they're under social pressure, they don't always practice safe sex.

At our university, students can obtain a condom at Student Health Services in the University Center.

Practicing safe sex is not enough, according to national health educators. Abstinence is the surest way to prevent the contraction of AIDS. However, statistics prove that 80 percent of students are sexually active during college.

Neil Alley, PhD, outreach worker at the Northern Kentucky Health Department, said, "college students are not risk free. They need to educate themselves."

During the past year, Alley said statistics in Northern Kentucky for reported AIDS cases have gone down, but nationally they have increased.

"One thing that is misleading is that a lot of people in Northern Kentucky go across the river into Cincinnati for treatment and testing," said Pearl Morris, associate at the Northern Kentucky Health Department. "There is a lot of cross over."

According to Alley, people can be tested anonymously and confidentially. Those tested do not have to give a name or address when tested anonymously.

Confidential testing requires a name and address, but it is left confidential. Confidential testing is reported to the state as a number only. No names are given. For those who take anonymous tests, a number is never reported to the state.

People can be tested at any of the Northern Kentucky District Health Centers.

National AIDS Awareness Week is Oct. 21 through 26. Student Government will be sponsoring a number of activities designed to inform students of the virus and it's prevention.

"I am trying to get the faculty involved, too. By incorporating them, it will hopefully have a greater effect on the overall campus," said Krista Wagner, coordinator of AIDS Awareness Week.

"It is our (SG) hope that AIDS Awareness Week will educate the student body about AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases," she added.

Midterms And Papers And Homework, Oh My! How To Overcome The Mid-semester Blahs

LISA SPERANDEO
GENERAL MANAGER
ANN ABBOTT
EXECUTIVE EDITOR

It's that time of year again - an invisible mist settles on campus. The Fall Funk; it can't actually be seen, but boy can it be felt!

NKU's student body is a potluck of sorts - the is great diversity in age, social, financial and education backgrounds, yet at this point in the semester most students will agree on one thing; every one, it seems is suffering from mid-semester B.L.A.H.S.!

Time, it seems, disappears. Priorities become muddled. The average student struggles to maintain a grasp - a grasp on reality, a grasp on his or her studies, a grasp on anything.

The result is the before mentioned B.L.A.H.S. syndrome.

Or, more specifically, Boredom, Lousy grades, Anxiety in general, Hard work (too much of an unwanted thing) and the ever present, seemingly unsurmountable Studitis (if that can be permitted into the English language for the purposes of this story).

B.L.A.H.S., it's an ugly word for an equally ugly situation. It's mid-semester and every midterm is on the same day.

It's a pitbull of a professor screaming again about poor grammar in the latest term paper - the one with the killer research that even the lowest of CIA members get paid top dollar to prepare.

It's beautiful, wonderful, pristine au-turn leaving you with severe allergies and/or a headache.

B.L.A.H.S. is also a $38.00 ticket, still crumpled on the backseat of the car.

No, not the $10.00 ticket from DPS, received for parking on the sidewalk next to the U.C. building because a long walk to Ford Escort in first gear was exhibiting an intent to stop, but what officer would listen to a sleepy-eyed, student, with-out the benefit of makeup, wearing a sweatshirt that read "bum equipment" across the chest.

Besides, it's hard to argue when one's will respond to confessions of severe depression with a "well, let me tell you how bad the last few weeks have been for me."

A best friend's response may not be so cavalier. "_____ happens" is a favorite response of those friends too wrapped up in their own problems to give a flying fig about anyone else's.

So what is the purpose of this article? To make like better? No such luck.

It's probably too late anyway.

Sometimes just recognizing the problem, thinking about it, can help.

Just being told that you're not crazy is a help.

Finding happiness and fulfillment is the ultimate weapon to chase away any B.L.A.H.S.

Try not to be blinded by so much foresight and ambition that the trees are lost in the forest. The trees are what's happening to you now. The forest is your whole life.

Trees will come and go - some will cause you stress, others will cause you joy, some will cause you both, but the most important thing is to appreciate them one at a time, for what they are, not for what they could be or should be or might be.

Take time to enjoy the thoughts, feelings, and happenings you are experiencing right now.

"The foolish man seeks happiness in the distance; the wise grows it under his feet." - James Oppenheim.

And remember, you're not alone!

Professional Offers Advice

Three major problems plague students at this time each semester. The problems are procrastination, perfectionism and focusing. according to Michael Meier, counselor in the Health and Counseling Center.

"Students become more concerned about midterms than finals. At least our case load tends to pick up around this time," Meier said.

"There is a term in psychology called the self-ideal," he continued.

"We have a great deal of stress and frustration if we don't see ourselves achieving this."

Stay paced - do not procrastinate, he advises, and stay focused on the present.

Too much focus on the future can lead to anxiety and worry, while focusing on the past leads to depression and guilt, Meier explained.

To chase away the mid-semester blahs, Meier also advises:

* Do something for yourself.

"Doing something for yourself helps, rather than worrying about what you need to do or be."

* Exercise to alleviate stress.

* Take advantage of the Health and Counseling Center at NKU - it's free.

* Most importantly; "Do your best, and do O.K. with that," he said.

"Try to meet your own expectations instead of someone else's - and have fun with that."

NKU Atop Conference Standings

Norsemen Down Nationally Ranked Lewis, Move To Top Of Conference Standings

BRIAN BALLMAN
STAFF WRITER

An upset win over conference leading and nationally ranked Lewis University last Saturday put the NKU men's soccer team atop the Great Lakes Valley Conference.

NKU defeated the 12th ranked Flyers 4-2.

NKU started out quickly, scoring just four minutes into the match.

Junior Todd Gruenwald passed the ball to senior Tim Lawson breaking down the left side of the field. Lawson passed the ball back to Gruenwald, who put a shot past the Lewis goalie to give NKU a 1-0 lead.

After the goal, NKU relaxed and Lewis took control.

NKU coach John Toeppen said the team has had a tendency to let up at times this season.

"After Wednesday's game a lot of the players were sore and hurt, so we got that quick goal and relaxed for a while," Toeppen said.

Lewis capitalized on the sluggish play of NKU and scored two goals in the remainder of the half.

Lewis' first score came 11 minutes into the match. Mark Swain, the team's leading scorer, put a headball past Norse goalie Tim Yacks off of a direct kick from Joe Regan to tie the score at one.

The Flyers took the lead with only four minutes remaining in the first half. Jim Mitchell's shot in the upper left hand corner of the goal got by Yacks, giving Lewis a 2-1 lead.

Trailing 2-1 at the half, Coach Toeppen knew the team would have to come out more aggressive in the second half.

"I kind of got on them. I knew we had to come out and get a couple of goals in there. They came out with a lot of intensity in the second half," Toeppen said.

NKU tied the match just eight minutes into the second half. Senior George Senfner dribbled the ball down the left side of the goal. His crossing pass was kicked around until junior Kevin Wolff kicked a low, line shot past Lewis goalie Albert Martin, tying the score 2-2.

Northern regained the lead five minutes later. Todd Gruenwald scored his second goal of the game on a direct kick just outside the penalty area to put NKU ahead 3-2.

Several Lewis players and coaches were upset with the call on the direct kick and argued with the officials.

One player from Lewis was given a red card, disqualifying him for the remainder of the game.

With a little more than 13 minutes remaining in the game, Lewis' battle with the officials came to a head.

NKU was awarded a penalty kick after Martin kicked NKU's Lawson in the head as he laid on the ground following a collision between the two.

The Lewis bench again erupted with anger. Before play would again resume, Lewis head coach Alex Hernandez was ejected from the game.

After the long delay, junior Tom Derenthal converted the penalty kick for his conference-leading eleventh goal of the season. The goal gave NKU the 4-2 lead that would stand as the final score of the game.

Martin walked off the field minutes later following another confrontation with Lawson. Martin began punching Lawson after the two again collided. Lawson, who did not swing at Martin, was given a yellow card. Martin was ejected from the game.

The four goals NKU scored off Martin matched the total number of goals he had previously allowed all season.

Coach Toeppen was happy with the way the team played in the second half, but not surprised.

"We're a second half team. We always play well in the second half. I knew if we were close in the first half we'd have a shot at it," he said.

The victory improved Northern's record to 9-4 overall and 4-1 in the GLVC.

With two conference games remaining, NKU moves into the conference lead by virtue of its victory over Lewis.

NKU Beats GLVC Opponent St. Joseph's, Keep Hold Of Conference Lead

SCOTT COOK
SPORTS EDITOR

Only one obstacle remains for the NKU men's soccer team in its quest for the regular season conference title and home field advantage in the conference tournament. The obstacle is the University of Southern Indiana.

The two teams meet this Friday night in Evansville, Ind.

NKU moved into first place in the Great Lakes Valley Conference by defeating Lewis University 4-2 last Saturday.

The Norsemen kept their hold on first place by defeating St. Joseph's College 4-3 in overtime last Sunday.

NKU jumped out to a 1-0 lead when junior forward Todd Gruenwald scored off a pass from junior Tom Derenthal 12 minutes into the game.

St. Joseph's tied the game a little over a minute later when forward Mike Van Zwieten rebounded a shot off the crossbar and scored past NKU sophomore goalie Tim Yacks.

NKU scored twice more in the first half on goals by senior Tim Lawson and junior Steve Giles.

NKU led 3-1 at halftime.

NKU head coach John Toeppen said his team had many chances to score in the first half, but couldn't convert.

NKU lost its intensity in the second half and St. Joseph's tied the score with two unassisted goals by Shawn Hurst and Ken Benich.

"We let up and let the team (St. Joseph's) back in the game," Toeppen said.

In overtime, NKU's intensity picked back up and the team's play began to improve.

Three minutes into overtime, Derenthal attempted to head a corner kick by Lawson into the goal, but the ball hit the crossbar.

Twelve minutes into the first fifteen minute overtime period NKU was awarded a penalty kick when Lawson was tripped up in front of the St. Joseph's goal before he could get a shot off.

Derenthal converted the kick giving NKU the 4-3 lead that stood as the final score of the game.

NKU outshot the Pumas 14-9 in the game.

The victory improved NKU's record to 10-4, 5-1 in the GLVC.

St. Joseph's fell to 3-11, 0-5-1 in the conference.

The victory allows NKU to control its own destiny in the battle for home field advantage in the conference tournament.

A win against Southern Indiana would assure NKU of the home field advantage.

"We want to come out real tough and beat them (USI) because they beat us twice last year," Lawson said.

USI defeated NKU 3-1 in the regular season last season and 6-0 in the championship game of the GLVC tournament last season.

Lawson's play has been affected the last two games because of a broken finger suffered against Lindsey Wilson on Oct. 9. He has to wear a cast for protection.

"It (the cast) throws my center of balance off when I run," he said.

Derenthal said he thinks the game against Southern Indiana will be tough, but if NKU's core players have a good game the team should win.

However, Derenthal said the team has to take the season one game at a time and not look ahead. NKU plays at Miami of Ohio before Friday's confrontation with Southern Indiana.

Toeppen said he would like to play the conference tournament at home, but in order to do that NKU must pull off what he sees as an upset, playing Southern Indiana on its home turf.

"Southern Indiana will be tough to beat at its home field," he said.

Brooks Running His Way To The Top Of The Heap

GREG HOLDER
STAFF WRITER

His desire to compete kept him in cross country, now he excels at the sport.

NKU sophomore Ernie Brooks has been running cross country since the eighth-grade.

"I was running the 600 meter in gym class one day when the cross country coach happened to catch a glimpse of me," said Brooks. "He invited me to try out for the team, so I gave it a shot."

"I really didn't like it at first, but since I was too small for football and I wanted to compete in athletics, I stuck it out and eventually got hooked on it."

Six years later, Brooks is still hooked.

In his second year on the NKU men's cross country team Brooks has become the dominant runner on the team.

He has been the top NKU finisher in four out of five meets this year. The only time he failed to be the top NKU finisher, he had an excuse. He was suffering from two pulled muscles in his back. Despite the injury he still finished fifth overall that week.

He finished first-place overall, individually, at the Wilmington Invitational.

Last year as a freshman, Brooks was the top NKU finisher in all of the team's meets except one. He won the individual title at the Xavier Invitational.

Cross country coach Tim Schlotman realizes the importance of Brooks to the team.

"He's an extremely hard worker who gets the most out of the ability he has," said Schlotman. "I wish everyone on the team had his work ethic. Ernie is definitely the kind of guy we need to recruit more of, and I'm looking to him to help us build our program in the coming years."

NKU junior midfielder Tom Derenthal watches Lewis University goalie Albert Martin attempt to save his penalty kick in last Saturday's game. Derenthal's kick was good giving NKU a 4-2 lead in the game. The score stood up as the final score in the game. The victory put NKU in first place in the Great Lakes Valley Conference. Northerner photo by Julie Venable.

Even though he has been successful as an individual runner, Brooks hasn't forgotten about his teammates. He is happy with how the men's cross country has performed this year.

"I'm definitely pleased," Brooks said. "I see so much more improvement this year in us as a whole. We're also a bit older now and a lot more experienced."

Brooks also said the addition of new runners to the team has helped.

According to Brooks, the upcoming conference meet is the focus of the team now. He said the team has set a goal to finish third in the meet on Oct. 26.

Two of the teams opponents in the meet are ranked in the latest NCAA Division II men's cross country poll. Southern Indiana is number four and Lewis University is 16th.

"It may be a bit of a steep goal," said Brooks, "But I think we can do it. Since we're going up against several top teams, including Southern Indiana, we are trying to get mentally ready."

Cross country is not all Brooks likes to do.

He is a radio, television and film major. After graduation he hopes to get into radio broadcasting. He also has other interests and hobbies such as listening to music, fishing, bowling and any type of competitive athletics.

Breathe Easy: Respiratory Care Helps You

Tom Cahill represents NKU's first respiratory care class.

NKU Offers Associate Degree

ANN ABBOTT
EXECUTIVE EDITOR

You may have never heard of a respiratory therapist, but if you are ever in a severe accident, or contract a life-threatening disease, chances are you will need this person's services.

Last week was Respiratory Care Week, ironically a week when so much attention was focused on respiratory concerns, the debate over NKU smoking policy was full blown.

Respiratory care, the work of therapists, is "specialty devoted to the diagnosis, treatment, and rehabilitation of patients with diseases affecting the respiratory system," according to Instructor Robert Langenderfer, RRT.

"Respiratory therapists are life-support specialists. They set up machines and adjust the controls on the ventilators that provide artificial respiration for patients," he said.

Respiratory care student Tom Cahill said he thinks his chosen profession is vitally important.

"The airway is one of the most important parts of the body. The heart, the brain, the other vital organs, none of these can function without adequate oxygen supply," Cahill said.

He also pointed out that the field of respiratory care is "up and coming."

"It (respiratory care) is being recognized by more and more doctors as a specialty. We are also required to be licensed in most states now," he said.

Cahill also said the field is expanding rapidly.

"The field is growing in need and importance. Starting pay is excellent. Respiratory care is a very good career choice right now," he said.

NKU offers an associates degree in respiratory care.

The program at NKU is about 21 months long, and covers two school years and the summer in between, according to Langenderfer.

Graduates will be certified and registry eligible.

Students who are interested in the respiratory care program at NKU can contact Langenderfer at 572-5604.

Pigmentation Devices in the sales department, said it was really difficult at first to change his entire lifestyle.

"When I was in school the only problem I had to worry about was which party to go to on Friday night," said Kunz. "Now it's bills, and work, and making money. It is a whole new set of responsibilities."

According to the graduates, priorities also change after graduation; in other words, one tends to worry about different things.

Foreman said he finds it amusing to think about what college students worry about while in school.

"When I was in school I used to worry about tests, and classes and a lot of things that weren't as bad as they seemed," said Foreman. "Now I have to worry about real life and sometimes it gets pretty scary."

Kunz agreed and said the pressures you have in college are trivial when compared to what you have to worry about after graduation.

Even though life after graduation isn't the easiest thing to handle, Foreman said he wouldn't change a thing.

"I'm glad I'm out in the real world looking for a good job," he said. "I felt it was time to get out of school anyway."

Frommeyer said she agrees and feels that graduating has only given her more options.

"I can always go back to school," she said. "But at least this way I have experienced what the real world has to offer and that puts me a step ahead."

family, but should strive to do things for the community as well.

It is an important part of Snowbird life to help others within the community. As a result of this strong belief, many of the Snowbirds have taken first aid and CPR. Shirley Oswald, a Snowbird woman raising five children on her own, runs a community store to help get school supplies to children who need them, said Neely.

Snowbird Cherokees has been nominated for the 1992 James Mooney Award of the Southern Anthropological Society. The award is given for the best book on the south and Southerners, written from an anthropological perspective. James Mooney was the first anthropologist to study the Cherokees in the late nineteenth century.

Neely said she will be doing a book signing and two lectures on the Cherokee native Americans at the Cincinnati Museum of Natural History on Oct. 19.

The lectures will begin at 1 p.m. and 3:30 p.m., and are free with museum admission. The book signing will take place after the lectures.

Half the author's profits on the book will go to the Ed Jackson Scholarship Fund to provide college scholarships to Snowbird Cherokee students.
